EXPLANATORY MEMORANDUM

(This memorandum is not part of the Bill)

1. The Mutual Assistance in Criminal Matters Bill 2002 implements, for Tuvalu, Part of an agreement made between the law officers of the Pacific Islands nations at Honiara in 1992. Its objects include —
  - (a) regulating the provision of assistance between Tuvalu and foreign countries in connection with taking evidence, issuing search warrants, and making and enforcing orders under a foreign law relating to the forfeiture of proceeds of crime;
  - (b) making arrangements for persons to travel from or to Tuvalu to give evidence in a criminal proceeding, or to assist in a criminal investigation.
2. The proposed Act imposes limits on the use of information obtained in any of these ways, and provides safeguards for persons who are taken to another country, or to Tuvalu from another country, to give evidence or help in a criminal investigation. It also sets out the limits to the kinds of offences for which assistance cannot be granted, particularly for a political offence.
3. Any other country may make an application, and Tuvalu may make an application to any other country, for assistance under the proposed Act.
4. A number of terms are defined to have the same meaning in the proposed Act as in the proposed Proceeds of Crime Act 2002. Some other terms used in limited areas of the proposed Act are defined in the relevant places.
5. The proposed Act does not limit any other way of obtaining assistance in criminal matters for example, under a bilateral treaty.
6. A request by Tuvalu for assistance must be made by the Attorney-General. A request by another country must be made to the Attorney-General or a person authorised to receive it. The Attorney-General may impose conditions on the granting of a request for assistance. The proposed Act sets out circumstances in which the Attorney-General may or must refuse a request.
7. The Attorney-General may request assistance from another country to obtain evidence, or produce a document or article required for proceedings for a criminal matter in Tuvalu.
8. A foreign country may ask for assistance from Tuvalu for evidence to be taken, or a document or thing produced, for proceedings in the other

- country. If the Attorney-General authorises it, the Court must take the evidence or order the document or article to be produced to it.
9. A person giving evidence or producing a document or thing is not compellable to give evidence, or to produce a document or thing, if he or she could not be compelled to do so under the law of the requesting country.
  10. If Tuvalu seeks the assistance of a foreign country, the Attorney-General may request an appropriate authority of the other country to issue a search warrant or similar instrument.
  11. If a foreign country makes a request to Tuvalu, the General-General may direct a police officer to apply for a search warrant. Anything seized during a search under the authority of the warrant is to be handed over to the Commissioner of Police to await the direction of the Attorney-General about the delivery of the thing to the requesting country.
  12. The Attorney -General may ask a foreign country to make a person available to give evidence, or assist in an investigation, in Tuvalu. The person must be in prison, either pending trial or sentence, or actually serving a term of imprisonment as punishment for an offence and must have consented to being taken to Tuvalu. The Attorney-General must make appropriate arrangements for the person to be kept in custody while in Tuvalu, if the foreign-n country so requests.
  13. A person who is in Tuvalu to give evidence, or to assist with a criminal proceeding is immune from detention, prosecution or punishment in Tuvalu for any offence committed (or allegedly committed) before he or she left the foreign country. The person is also immune from any civil suit that could not be brought against him or her if he or she were not in Tuvalu for any act or omission that occurred before he or she left the foreign country.
  14. In addition: he or she cannot be required to give evidence or assist with a proceeding other than the one specified in the request; cannot be required to answer a question that he or she could not be required to answer under the law of the foreign country; and cannot be required to produce any document or article that he or she could not be required to produce under the foreign law. All these immunities cease when the person leaves Tuvalu or has the opportunity of leaving Tuvalu but does not do so (with minor exceptions).
  15. Evidence given by the person is inadmissible in any other proceedings in Tuvalu (except proceedings for perjury in giving the evidence). Nothing that he or she says in giving assistance is admissible in any prosecution of him or her in Tuvalu.

16. The aim of these provisions is that it is desirable that persons come voluntarily to give evidence or help with an investigation, and this aim is best secured by ensuring that they can do so without fear that their evidence or help will be used against them.
17. The law of Tuvalu about conditions of imprisonment and the treatment of a person in prison apply to the person. A police officer may arrest a person without warrant if there are reasonable grounds to believe that the person has escaped from custody.
18. A person whose evidence is sought in a criminal proceeding in a foreign country must be a prisoner in Tuvalu and must have consented to give evidence in the foreign proceeding. The foreign authority making the request must give undertakings that the person will be immune from prosecution or civil suit, that the person's evidence will not be used against him or her in another proceeding, and that the person will be kept in custody and returned to Tuvalu, The Attorney General may arrange for the person to be taken to the requesting country and to travel to that country, if necessary under escort.
19. If a person who is serving a sentence of imprisonment is released in answer to a request to give evidence or help in an investigation, the time spent in custody in connection with the request forms part of his or her sentence.
20. The law of Tuvalu relating to imprisonment and escape from custody applies to persons in transit through Tuvalu from one country to another, to give evidence in a criminal proceeding or assist with an investigation in the other country, and a police officer can arrest a person without warrant if there is reason for believing that the person has escaped from custody while in transit.
21. The Proceeds of Crime Act 2002 (and corresponding laws of other countries) makes provision for confiscating the proceeds of crime, and for tracing tainted money and property. The proposed Act extends the system from one country to another.
22. The Attorney-General may ask an appropriate authority of a foreign country to arrange for the enforcement of forfeiture, pecuniary penalty or restraining orders made In Tuvalu, or for a search warrant (or equivalent) or an order under the proposed Act.
23. A request for the enforcement of a foreign forfeiture order, pecuniary penalty order or restraining orders against property in Tuvalu must be made to the General-General.
24. The Attorney-General may apply for the registration of a foreign forfeiture order or foreign pecuniary penalty order in the High Court. If the request is for the registration of a foreign restraining order, no person need have been convicted of the offence, but otherwise the requirements and procedure are similar. An amendment of a foreign order must be registered in the same way. Once an order is registered in the Court, it has effect, and may be enforced, as if it had been made under the proposed Proceeds of Crime Act 2002.

25. If a criminal proceeding or investigation has commenced in a foreign country, the appropriate authority of the foreign country can ask the Attorney-General to obtain a search warrant for the proceeding or investigation, or a restraining order.
26. If a property tracking document for a foreign serious offence is believed to be in Tuvalu, The Attorney-General may authorise a police officer to apply to a magistrate for a production order for the document, or for a search warrant in relation to it.
27. A defendant may apply to the High Court for a certificate that it would be in the interests of justice for evidence to be obtained, or for a person to attend, from overseas. If the Court issues the certificate, the Attorney-General must make the request. If the request is made and the foreign country refuses, the Attorney-General must give a certificate to that effect.
28. Since the law of Tuvalu cannot regulate how testimony is taken, or things produced or seized, in foreign countries, the proposed Act ensures that evidence will not be admissible before the courts of Tuvalu unless it is obtained in a way that the law of Tuvalu regards as fair, be recorded in one of a number of specified ways and be accompanied by a certificate from the Judicial officer before which it was taken and sealed with a public seal of the foreign country.
29. Foreign material is inadmissible if it would not have been admissible in the country in which it was taken; or the person who gave it is in Tuvalu and could give the testimony directly. or the Court directs that it not be used.
30. The Court may direct that foreign material not be admitted if allowing the material to be adduced would not be in the best interests of justice.
31. Material obtained from another country by a request under the Act is inadmissible in any proceedings other than those in connection with which the request was made. The material cannot be used for any other purpose without the Attorney-General's consent.
32. A person must not disclose requests for foreign assistance except in the course of his or her duties or with the consent of the Attorney-General.
